PREFACE.

THE Compiler of the following historical record of the Parliamentary Elections of Yorkshire, the materials for which he has collected at various times and from various sources,* ventures to think that, considering the important alterations which have lately been effected by the Legislature, both with regard to the constituencies and the areas of electoral districts, in the large and extensive County of York, the present is not an inopportune time to present a record of its Parliamentary Representation.

The result of these important alterations makes an entire change in the hitherto existing electoral arrangements of the County, as well as the distinctive titles of the future Parliamentary Representatives.

In submitting such a record to the public, the author, whilst neither claiming any originality of thought, nor pretending to any development

* Amongst the authorities from which the compiler has gathered his materials, and the authors from whom he has not only consulted, but largely drawn upon, are the following :—

of genius, is content to occupy in the literary world the humble position of being but

"A gatherer and a disposer of other men's stuff."

But he, nevertheless, ventures to hope that an occasional reference to his compilation will not prove altogether uninteresting to Yorkshiremen, especially to those whose families have been, and still are, closely associated with the public interests of this great County, recalling past memories of

"Stern patriots who for sacred freedom stood ;"

of men whose names still survive in the annals of their country as patriots and as statesmen, and whose memories are still held in reverence and affection for their public services and their private worth.

"Qui sui memores alios fecere merendo."

In the roll of the Parliamentary Representatives of Yorkshire will be found the names of some of the most eminent statesmen that have controlled the destinies of the Empire ; amongst whom, Fairfax, the celebrated Parliamentary General, who represented the County ; Marvell, the incorruptible patriot, many years member for Hull ; Pulteney, (the contemporary of the great Sir Robert Walpole), who represented Hedon for upwards of twenty years ; William Pitt, the eminent statesman, of whom it has been said

"None half so fit

To guide the helm of state affairs as great Immortal Pitt,"

who was some time member for Aldborough ; Wilberforce, the untiring and ultimately successful opponent of the Slave Trade, was for several years member for the County and also for Hull ; Henry Grattan, the patriotic Irishman, one of the last members of the Irish Parliament previous to the Union, the representative for Malton ; Edmund Burke, "statesman, orator, and wit," member for the same borough ; and William Ewart Gladstone, twice Prime Minister, who was returned for Leeds at the general election in 1880. To this list may be added the name of the illustrious Charles James Fox,

"On whose burning tongue

Truth, and peace, and freedom hung,"

who, at one election, unsuccessfully contested the Borough of Pontefract.

The roll of representatives will also disclose the names of some of the greatest lawyers who have adorned the English bench, comprising several Lord Chancellors, amongst whom may be mentioned the cautious Lord Eldon, member for Boroughbridge ; the brilliant and eloquent Lord Brougham, member for Knaresborough, and also for the County; Lord St. Leonards, member for Ripon, the only lawyer who, (with the exception of Lord Campbell, who was Lord Chancellor of Ireland for about two months,) has held both the distinguished posts of Lord Chancellor of Ireland and Lord Chancellor of England; Lord Cottenham and Lord Selborne, the one the representative for Malton, and the other for Richmond; and also two Lords Chief Justices, Lord Mansfield and Lord Abinger; the former the representative for Boroughbridge, the latter some time member for Malton.

Amongst eminent literary men will be found the names of Sir Richard Steele, member for Boroughbridge; Lord Macaulay and Lord Houghton; the representatives respectively for Leeds and Pontefract.

Names, also, of distinguished travellers will be found: notably, Lord Anson, the circumnavigator, member for Hedon; and James Silk Buckingham, the Eastern traveller, member for Sheffield.

To this list of distinguished men may be added the name of the first Commoner of England, The Rt. Hon. Charles Manners Sutton, many years Speaker of the House of Commons, and some time member for Scarborough.

The author has not attempted to attach to the roll of parliamentary representatives the political principles held or professed by them, finding that the subject was so beset with insurmountable difficulties, contradictions, and uncertainties, as to render the attempt futile; ever since the introduction of political parties into the House of Commons, instances constantly occur on the part of the representatives, of changes in political principles, and desertion of political parties.

“Manners with fortunes, humours turn with climes, Tenets with books, and principles with times.”

From unavoidable circumstances the issue of this work has been delayed several months. The author has taken advantage of this delay to furnish a complete list of the representatives elected by the new constituencies at the general election in the autumn of 1885 and, also, at the recent general election of July last.

The roll of illustrious Yorkshiremen, which is given at the end of this work, who have held the important office of High Sheriff of the County will, the author trusts, be found a not uninteresting record of the eminent personages who, for more than eight centuries, have, from time to time, filled that ancient and honourable trust.

The author desires to record his grateful acknowledgment of the valuable assistance which he has received from Mr. W. G. B. Page, Sub-Librarian of the Hull Subscription Library, and Editor of The Hull Quarterly and East Riding Portfolio, to whom he is specially indebted for his copious and comprehensive index, which adds so much to the usefulness and value of local history.

INTRODUCTION.

YORKSHIRE, by far the largest county in England, extending one hundred and thirty miles in length from east to west, and ninety miles in breadth from north to south, and not less than four hundred and sixty miles in circuit, is computed to contain three millions, six hundred and ninety-eight thousand, three hundred and eighty acres; (a) with a population, according to the Census of 1881, of two millions, eight hundred and eighty-six thousand, five hundred and sixty-four souls.

This great county, before the Reform Act of 1885, contained, in addition to the three divisions of the county—the North, East, and West Ridings—nineteen Parliamentary Boroughs, and was represented in the House of Commons by thirty-eight Members of Parliament.

The institution of the British Parliament lies so deeply hidden in the remoteness of antiquity that, to trace its origin, would be a task both difficult in itself and unsatisfactory in its results. That a system of Parliamentary representation in some shape or other has existed from the earliest period of the authentic history of our country, all our English historians and commentators appear to be agreed. And that the local divisions of the kingdom consisted in those early times to a great extent of the same counties, shires, and boroughs as at the present day, is confirmed by the mention of them by the names which they still retain in that great fiscal record of the kingdom, Domesday Book. And from the same authentic source it will be found that such local divisions of counties, shires, and boroughs, had, in those early times, as now, their exclusive jurisdictions and their separate presiding officers, whose functions and titles have survived to the present day. The ancient Saxon shire-reeve, the chief officer of the shire had, to a great extent, the same functions as are exercised by the still existing honourable office of High Sheriff. The borough-reeve of the past, a title still extant, is identical with the borough-reeve of the present. Whilst the ancient titles of Eorl and Elderman are synonymous with a distinction still recognized in the British Peerage, and with that municipal dignitary the alderman of our own times. It may also be noticed that the law which required, for the purposes of trade and local government, the establishment in every borough of trade guilds, to some one of which every trader was required to belong, in order that he might be free to exercise his calling, gave rise to the familiar name of Freeman, an important factor in Parliamentary elections in days not so long gone by.

Although the conquest of this country by the Normans introduced into England a new dynasty, the wily invader did not proceed all at once to revolutionise its existing institutions, yet the tyranny and oppression which soon began to be exercised by the Sovereign, and the gradual development of the feudal system of government, led, eventually, to the subversion of the still existing Saxon institutions, which recognised the powers and privileges of the Barons, and secured the liberties and freedom of the people. But tyranny and oppression have their limits, and although the English people for upwards of a century were compelled by force of circumstances to submit to a system of violence and wrong at the hands of each succeeding Sovereign of the Norman Dynasty, yet, at length the time came when the people could no longer bear the greivous yoke. The Barons, in defence of their own order, and to enable them to retain their power and ancient privileges, associated their cause with that of the people, and the result of that combination was that the Barons succeeded in forcibly obtaining from a weak and imperious monarch the famous Magna Charta, which, if not the foundation, is the main bulwark of that glorious constitution under which the English nation has for so many generations lived, flourished, and prospered.

Notwithstanding, the Barons had so far succeeded in recovering their rights and privileges by obtaining the great Charter, they soon discovered that they possessed no security for the due fulfilment and execution of it, and that they were destitute of all legislative authority. During the long reign of Henry III. the Charter was neglected and ignored, and both Barons and people found themselves without the means of enforcing an obedience to its provisions on the part of the Sovereign other than by the power of the sword. The Barons again making common cause with the people, resolutely took a great part of the executive power out of the hands of the King, and transferred it to a Council of their own body. The lesser Barons, in process of time, finding it inconvenient on the score of expense to attend in person, usually delegated some member of their body in the locality to represent them in the Council, hence we may trace the probable origin of "Knights of the Shire."

Thus, after a protracted struggle, the Crown became sufficiently humbled, and the great Earl of Leicester, as well to secure his own power as to gratify the nation, induced the King to adopt the expedient of summoning a Parliament, consisting of two Knights from each Shire, and two Burgesses from each Borough in the Kingdom, and, from that period, Knights of Shires and Burgesses of Boroughs have been, at irregular intervals, summoned and returned as representatives.

King Edward I., although he pretended to restore the ancient constitution, manifested so much partiality that representation was limited, and but few Boroughs received precepts to return representatives—only one hundred and seventy in the whole Kingdom—and many of those on account of their poverty did not comply with the writs and make returns. (a) The Yorkshire Boroughs to which writs were then issued, were York, Scarborough, Malton, Beverley, Hedon, Pickering, Ravenser, (Raven-spurn) Tickhill, and Yarm.

In the reign of King Edward II., the Boroughs of Beverley, Hull, Ravenser, Ripon, Scarborough, and York sent representatives to Parliament, and in the reign of King Edward III., Doncaster appears once to have had a representative.

The costly and sanguinary contests between the two great rival houses of York and Lancaster reduced the Burgesses to such straits and poverty that they were unable to maintain their representatives in Parliament, and in some of the Yorkshire Boroughs returns were not made (b)

The parsimony displayed by King Henry VII. enabled him to well-nigh dispense with Parliaments altogether, and but few were summoned during his reign. During the long and eventful reign of his successor, Henry VIII., six Parliaments were summoned, but only

b It was the practice for the Burgesses to pay their representatives; this practice continued for a long time Mr. Andrew Marvell, the member for Hull, is said to have been the last member of Parliament who received wages from his constituents.

in two are found returns from Yorkshire, for probably the same reason as in the last reign, their inability to pay the wages of their members.

It was therefore not until the reign of Edward VI. that the Parliaments became more frequent in their assembling and more independent in their action, and hence a more regular succession of representatives is to be met with. In addition to the County, the only places in Yorkshire which were represented in Parliament previous to the reign of King Edward VI., were the City of York, the Boroughs of Kingston-upon-Hull, Malton, and Scarborough, the disfranchised Boroughs of Beverley, and Hedon, and the long disused Boroughs of Doncaster, Pickering, Ravenser, Tickhill, and Yarm.

The great Council of the Kingdom in former times, that is before the reign of King Edward VI., usually met three times in the year, generally on the three great festivals of Christmas, Easter, and Whitsuntide. On these occasions "the King met his estates with great solemnity, solemn days of entertainment were held, and when the feasting was over they fell to the dispatch of public affairs" (a) These Councils were held in various parts of the Kingdom, frequently at York; but from the time of King Edward VI., with but few exceptions, the assembling of Parliament has invariably been at Westminster. These exceptions occur in the reign of Queen Mary, when a Parliament was held at Warwick, and another at Oxford; and in the reign of King Charles II., when one met at Oxford.

The County of York, at the time of the passing of the Redistribution of Seats Act of 1885, contained, in addition to the Cities of York and Ripon, the existing parliamentary Boroughs of Bradford, Dewsbury, Halifax, Huddersfield, Kingston-upon-Hull, Knaresborough, Leeds, a Spelman.

Malton, Middlesborough, Northallerton, Pontefract, Richmond, Scarborough, Sheffield, Thirsk, Wakefield, and Whitby, together with the Boroughs of Aldborough, Boroughbridge, and Hedon, disfranchised in 1832, and Beverley, disfranchised in 1870, as well as the disused Boroughs of Doncaster and Tickhill, in the West Riding; Pickering and Yarm, in the North Riding, and Ravenser in the East Riding, having long since disappeared.

During the present century, numerous alterations have been made from time to time, both with regard to the constituencies and the representation of Yorkshire; the number of Knights of the Shire has been increased, new Boroughs have been created, and old ones disfranchised.

The first important alteration in the Parliamentary Representation of Yorkshire was made in the year 1821, by the Act 1 and 2 Geo. IV., cap. 47: "An Act to exclude the Borough of Grampound, in the County of Cornwall, from sending Burgesses to serve in Parliament, and to enable the County of York to send two additional Knights to serve in Parliament in lieu thereof." By this Statute it was enacted that the County of York should thenceforth return four members to Parliament instead of two.

The Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832, 2 William IV., cap. 45, "An Act to amend the Representation of the People in England and Wales," again made important alterations in the Parliamentary Representation of Yorkshire. By that act it was provided that in all future Parliaments there should be six Knights of the Shire instead of four, to serve for the country, viz., two for each of the three Ridings, as if each of the three Ridings were a separate county; and it was further provided that the Court for the election of Knights of the Shire for the North Riding should be holden at the City of York; that for the West Riding at Wakefield; and that for the East Riding at Beverley. It was also enacted that the Boroughs of Aldborough, Boroughbridge, and Hedon, should, from and after the end of the then present Parliament, cease to return any member or members; and that the Boroughs of Thirsk and Northallerton, which had theretofore two representatives, should after the end of the then present Parliament return one member each and no more. And by the same act the towns of Bradford, Halifax, Leeds, and Sheffield, were created new Boroughs, each of which should at the end of the then present Parliament, return two members. And the towns of Huddersfield, Wakefield, and Whitby, were also created new Parliamentary Boroughs, each to return one member.

In 1861, an Act of Parliament was passed, 24 and 25 Vict. cap. 112, "An Act for the Appropriation of the Seats vacated by the Disfranchisement of the Boroughs of Sudbury and St. Albans," which affected the representation of the West Riding of the county. By that Statute it was enacted that after the dissolution of the then present Parliament, the West Riding should be divided into two Divisions, to be called respectively the Northern and Southern divisions; and that in all future Parliaments there should be two Knights of the Shire for each of such Divisions, to be chosen in the same manner, by the same description of voters, and in respect of the same rights of voting as if each such Division was a separate County. The Act also provided that the Court for the election of Knights of the Shire for the Northern Division should be held at Leeds, and that for the Southern Division at Wakefield.

The Act 30 and 31 Vict. Cap. 102, "An Act to further amend the Laws relating to the Representation of the People in England and Wales," passed in the year 1867, made further important alterations in the representation of the County, and several of the Yorkshire Boroughs. By that measure it was enacted, as regards the County, that from and after the end of the then present Parliament the West Riding should be divided into three Divisions, to be called respectively the Northern, the Mid, and the Southern Divisions; (by the 31 and 32 Vict. Cap. 46, the name of Mid Division was changed to that of Eastern Division) and that in all future Parliaments there should be two members to serve for each of such Divisions, to be chosen in the same manner, and by the same description of voters, and in respect of the same rights of voting, as if each such Division was a separate County. It was also by this Act provided that, from and after the end of the then present Parliament, no Borough which had a less population than ten thousand at the Census of 1861, should return more than one member to serve in Parliament. The Boroughs of Knaresborough, Malton, Richmond, and Ripon, not having a sufficient population, came within the provisions of the Act, and from that time each of these Boroughs returned only one member to Parliament until disfranchised by the Reform Act of 1885. The Act of 1867 gave to the Borough of Leeds an additional member,^(a) and provided that the towns of Dewsbury and Middlesborough should be created Parliamentary Boroughs, each returning one member to serve in Parliament.

A further alteration in the Borough constituencies was made in 1870 by the Act 33 and 34 Vict. Cap. 21, "An Act to disfranchise the Boroughs of Bridgewater and Beverley," whereby it is provided that the Borough of Beverley should, after the passing of the act, cease to return any member or members to serve in Parliament.

But none of the alterations already noticed bear any comparison in importance with those effected by the recent Act of Parliament, 48 and 49 Vict. Cap. 23, "An Act for the Redistribution of Seats at Parliamentary Elections, and for other purposes." By this act the three Ridings of the County are divided into electoral districts; seven Parliamentary Boroughs are disfranchised; in the case of two Boroughs the number of representatives are reduced to one, and three large Boroughs are subdivided into wards or electoral divisions. These alterations will have the effect of causing many old and long cherished historical associations to be obliterated, and many old historical land-marks to be removed.

^a The same privilege was extended to Manchester, Liverpool, and Birmingham, each of which places were to have three representatives.

After the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832, the House of Commons consisted of 658 members, the subsequent disfranchisement of certain Boroughs reduced the number to 652, which was again increased by 18 members by the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885; the present House of Commons therefore consists of 670 members, thus distributed over the United Kingdom, viz., England and Wales, 495 representatives, being an addition of six; Scotland, 72, an addition of twelve; and Ireland, 103, no addition being made. The counties of the United Kingdom are subdivided into electoral divisions, somewhat proportionate to the population. All boroughs having a less population than 15,000 have been wholly disfranchised. Those with a population of from 15,000 to 50,000 having two representatives have now one; and those Boroughs containing a population of more than 165,000 have had given to them additional members in proportion to the population.

The result of these important alterations, so far as Yorkshire is concerned, is, that the County and Boroughs are now represented by fifty-two members of Parliament, being an increase of fourteen.

The North Riding of the County, heretofore represented by two members, now consists of four divisions, with one member each, viz., the Thirsk and Malton Division; the Richmond; the Cleveland; and the Whitby Divisions.

The East Riding, which formerly returned two members, is now divided into three divisions with one member each, viz., the Holderness; the Buckrose; and the Howdenshire Divisions.

The West Riding, heretofore divided into three divisions with two members each, now contains nineteen divisions with one member each, being an increase of thirteen representatives; the Northern part comprising five divisions, viz., the Skipton, Keighly, Shipley, Sowerby and the Elland Divisions. The Southern part comprising eight divisions, viz., the Morley, Normanton, Colne Valley, Holmfirth, Barnsley, Hallamshire, Rotherham, and Doncaster Divisions. The Eastern part contains six divisions, viz., the Ripon, Otley, Barkston Ash, Osgoldcross, Pudsey and the Spenn Valley Divisions.

The following seven Boroughs, each having a population of less than 15,000, viz., Knaresborough, Malton, Northallerton, Richmond, Ripon, Thirsk, and Whitby have been disfranchised, and cease to return members to Parliament. Whilst the Boroughs of Pontefract and Scarborough, each having a population of less than 50,000, have been deprived of one member each, and now return only one in lieu of two. The four following Boroughs have had assigned to them an increased number of representatives according to their population, viz., Bradford, Kingston-upon-Hull, Leeds, and Sheffield, the two former having three members each, and the two latter five.

Thus the County and the Boroughs have the fifty-two representatives equally divided, the three Ridings returning twenty-six, and the Boroughs twenty-six, as under :

Parliamentary Representation of Yorkshire.

COUNTY OF YORK.

THE superficial contents of Yorkshire are computed at 3,698,380 acres,* with a population, according to the census of 1881, of 2,886,564.

From the year 1290, (18 Edward I.), the earliest authentic record of the Parliamentary Representation of Yorkshire to the year 1826. The County of York was represented in Parliament, (with but few intermissions, where the returns are wanting), by two knights of the shire.

The first legislative enactment affecting the representation of the County was in the year 1821, (1st George IV.) Soon after the assembling of the Parliament elected in 1818, in consequence of a petition against the return of the two Members for the Borough of Grampound in Cornwall, on the ground of bribery and corruption, a Bill was introduced into the House of Commons by Lord John Russell, for the disfranchisement of that borough, and the conferring of the privilege of the elective franchise on the town of Leeds, which was not at that time a Parliamentary borough. During the debate on the Bill, a proposal was made as an amendment that the County of York, which then only returned two members to Parliament, should be divided into two counties, one to consist of the West Riding, and the other of the North and East Ridings combined; and, that instead of giving two representatives to Leeds, two knights of the Shire should be returned for each of these divisions. The Bill met with considerable opposition, and before the end of the Session it was withdrawn. On the reassembling of Parliament in January 1821, Lord John Russell again introduced the Bill into the House of Commons, when the proposal to give two additional members to the county of York, instead of conferring that privilege on the town of Leeds, was again brought forward, but rejected by a large majority, the numbers being for the amendment 66, against 126, leaving a majority of 60 in favour of the measure proposed by Lord John Russell. A long debate then ensued on the qualification for the franchise in the proposed Parliamentary Borough of Leeds. Mr. James Stuart Wortley, one of the members for the county, proposed that the qualification should be limited to householders of not less than the annual value of twenty pounds; to this proposal an amendment was moved by Lord Milton, the other member for the county, that the franchise should be extended to all persons paying scot and lot. On a division Mr. James Stuart Wortley's motion was carried by a majority of 54, the numbers being 148 to 94. Lord John Russell, considering that so important an alteration seriously affected the essential principle of the Bill of which he had charge, declined to proceed further with it. Mr. Stuart Wortley, however, took up the Bill and succeeded in passing it in its amended form through the House of Commons. When the measure came before the House of Lords, the giving of two additional members to the County of York was again discussed, several amendments were suggested, one being the division of the county into two representative districts, each returning two members to Parliament; the one district to comprise the West Riding, and the North and East Ridings to form the other; and eventually, an amendment proposed by Lord Liverpool, that the county should remain undivided and should return four knights of the Shire to Parliament instead of two, met with the general approbation of the House, and was substituted for the provision in the Bill conferring the privilege of returning two members on the town of Leeds. The Bill as amended by the House of Lords was ultimately adopted by the House of Commons, and the Act 1 and 2 George IV., Cap. 47. "for excluding the Borough of Grampound from sending Burgesses to serve in Parliament, and to enable the County of York to send two additional knights to serve in Parliament instead thereof," obtained the Royal assent on the 8th of June, 1821.

The Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832, (2nd William IV., Cap. 45), "to amend the representation of the people in England and Wales," again affected the representation of the county; by that act it was provided that in all future Parliaments there should be six knights of the Shire instead of four, to serve for the County of York; that is to say, two knights for each of the three Ridings, as if each Riding was a separate County, and that the Court for the election of knights of the Shire for the North Riding should be holden at the City of York; that for the East Riding at Beverley; and that for the West Riding at Wakefield.

In 1861, the Act 24 and 25 Vict. Cap. 112, "for the appropriation of the seats vacated by the disfranchisement of the Boroughs of Sudbury and St. Albans" was passed, by which it was enacted that, after the dissolution of the then existing Parliament, the West Riding of the County of York should be divided into two divisions, to be called respectively the Northern and Southern Divisions; the Northern Division containing the wapentakes of Staincliffe, and Ewecross, Claro, Skyrack, and Morley; the Southern Division the Wapentakes of Barkston Ash, Osgoldcross, Strafforth, and Tickhill, Staincross, and Agbrigg, and that, in all future Parliaments, there should be Two Knights of the Shire to serve for each of the said Northern and Southern divisions. The Court for the Northern division being held at Leeds, and for the Southern at Wakefield.

The Act 30 and 31 Vict. Cap. 102, (1867), "to further amend the laws relating to the representation of the people in England and Wales," made another change in the representation of the County of York; by that measure it was enacted that from and after the end of the then existing Parliament, the West Riding should be divided into three divisions, to be called, respectively, the Northern division, the Mid division, and the Southern division, (by the 31 and 32 Vict. Cap. 46. the name of Mid division was changed to that of Eastern division) and that in all future Parliaments there should be two members to serve for each of such divisions as if each such division was a separate County.

The County of York at the present time returns ten knights of the Shire as representatives to Parliament, viz: the North and East Ridings send two each, and the West Riding six, that is, two for each of the three divisions. The three divisions of the West Riding comprise respectively the following areas: the Northern division consists of the wapentakes of Ewecross and Staincliffe, and the parishes of Bradford, and Halifax, and the townships of Bolton and Idle in the wapentake of Morley. The Eastern division the wapentakes of Claro, Skyrack, Barkston Ash, Osgoldcross, and Morley, except the parishes of Bradford and Idle, and the Southern division the hundreds of Agbrigg, Strafforth and Tickhill and Staincross.

THE CITY OF YORK.

YORK, the capital of the large Shire to which it gives name, the See of an Archbishop, and in rank the second city in England, is situated near the junction of the three Ridings, locally in the North Riding, but independent of all, being a city and county of itself.

York is mentioned in Doomsday as a City, and reference is made therein, of the Citizens and Burgesses residing in the City.

It appears that, from 23 Edward I. (1295), Representatives have been sent to Parliament from the City of York.

An old historian of York says, "The Election of Members of Parliament for this City is very popular and sometimes tumultuous, but anciently it was otherways, for instead of every Freeman of the City, resident or non-resident in it, having a vote in these elections which is the case at present, we find in the old Register Books, that two Citizens were formerly nominated to represent the City in Parliament by the Bench alone, and after by the Bench and Commons." a

The right of Election, up to the passing of the Reform Act of 1832, was in the Burgesses of the City, resident or non-resident, the admission of Freemen was in the discretion of the Bench, and in the reign of William and Mary, —circa 1689, complaints were made with respect to the undue making of Freemen after the test of the Writ. b

b Merewether and Stephens' History of Boroughs and Municipal Corporations.

Instances of encroachments upon the rights of the inhabitants, in many Cities and Boroughs, are to be found in the Journals of the House of Commons and elsewhere. a In the last year of the reign of King James II., the usurpation of the Crown became direct and open. By the practice of annulling the Charters, the King could, at pleasure, change everywhere the whole of the Magistracy. In the City of York the elections were transferred from the people to the Magistrates, who were all named by the Crown, which was in reality, as an English historian b observes, nothing different from the King's naming the members.

It has been said that the two members for the City of York enjoy the privilege of sitting in their scarlet gowns, next to the Members for the City of London on the Privy Counsellor's Bench, on the first day of the meeting of every new Parliament. c This privilege, if it ever did exist, has long since fallen into disuse.

A curious ordinance was made in the reign of King Edward IV., with reference to the payment of the expenses of the Aldermen who should be returned as representatives of the City. On the 30th September, 2nd. Edward IV., it was ordained and agreed by the assent of the Council: "Yat for as mykel as nowe late some Aldermen being at the Parliaments in time passed, have gone to borde, whereas they have at all times tofore holden house for the worshippe of the Citie. Yet fro henceforth what Aldermen soever shall go to Parliament, and will hold house, shall have for his costs daily iiis. and if he go to borde, he shall have but iis. upon the day, and no more fro nowe forthe." d

Moyser, 770; Colonel Jenkins, 502. "The charge I was at in this election came to £350, though it cost them more that lost it."—(Diary of Sir John Reresby, p. 320)

Sir John Reresby, Thrybergh Hall, in the West Riding, was an important man in his day, he was in high favour with the King and the Court; he was made Governor of York in 1682, (the last Military Governor York had.) He kept a dairy of the passing events of the day, a record of much interest to Yorkshiremen, which remained unpublished until the year 1875, when it was edited and published by Mr. J. J. Cartwright, M.A. Speaking in his diary of this Election, he says, "My Lord Mayor granted me the freedom of the Corporation, and obliged Sir Metcalf Robinson and me to join our interests together."

a Lord Viscount Dumblain in Scotland, Lord High Treasurer of England.

b An Alderman of York; and Lord Mayor.

c An attorney at York, and an Alderman in 1688, both he and Mr. Thomas Raynes were elected to the office of Lord Mayor. Mr. Raynes, who had been elected by the Corporation, was displaced by the King, and Alderman Waller, who was more friendly to the King's religious tenets, was appointed in his stead,—Hargrove's History of York.

d At this election a double return was made, the question being whether Edward Thompson or Henry Thompson was duly elected, each having polled 841 votes. The House resolved that Henry Thompson was duly returned. Mr. Thompson was the son of Sir Henry Thompson; he was an Alderman of York, and Lord Mayor in 1699. He built the house at Escrick; he died July 6th, 1700, and was buried at Escrick.

CITY OF RIPON.

RIPON is a Parliamentary Borough in the West Riding of Yorkshire. By virtue of an Act of Parliament, passed in 1836, (6 and 7 William IV. Cap. 77), an Episcopal See was erected at Ripon, and according to ancient precedent, the town became thenceforth dignified by the appellation of City.

The right of Election, up to the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832. was in the owners of certain properties in the Borough called Burgage-holds; these Burgage-holds, which conferred the right of voting, were, at the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act, and had been for upwards of one hundred and twenty years previously, the exclusive property of the Aislabie family, of Studley Castle, and their descendants, who invariably nominated the representatives. Upon the decease of Mrs. Allanson, who was the heiress of the Aislabie family, the late William Lawrence Esq., of Kirby Fletcham, became the proprietor, from whom the castle and estates descended to Miss Lawrence, the daughter of that gentleman, a and from her to the present owner of Studley Royal, the Marquis of Ripon.

The Borough of Ripon first returned Representatives to Parliament in the year 1295, and again in 1307; no further returns are found until 1337, when the Town of Ripon, in obedience to writs issued 11th Edward III., sent "three men" as its representatives. From that time

there does not appear to have been any members returned to Parliament until the year 1553, the first Parliament of Queen Mary, since which time the returns seem to have been pretty regular.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the proprietorship of the Burgage-holds, there have been but few contested Elections in the Borough of Ripon. Mr. Oldfield, in his exhaustive History of the Boroughs of Great Britain, states that, in 1816 the number of voters was about 146, and that the proprietor of the Borough was Miss Lawrence.

On the passing of the Reform Act of 1832, the franchise was extended to inhabitant householders, but the Castle influence continued predominant.

By the Act 30 and 31 Vict., Cap. 102, the Borough of Ripon, by reason of its not having a population of ten thousand persons, lost the privilege of returning two members to Parliament, and from that time it has returned only one.

The population of Ripon, according to the Census of 1881, was 7390. a

BOROUGH OF BRADFORD.

BRADFORD, a Market Town and Municipal and Parliamentary Borough, in the Wapentake of Morley, and liberty of the honour of Pontefract, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, is the principal seat and emporium of the worsted and stuff manufacture, and is one of the most thriving Market towns in the Kingdom.

Bradford was created a Parliamentary Borough in 1832, by virtue of the provisions of the Parliamentary Reform Act of that year returning two members to Parliament. It received a Charter of Incorporation, with a separate Commission of the Peace, and became a Municipal Borough in 1847. The Parliamentary bounds of the Borough comprise the four townships of Bradford, Bowling, Horton, and Manningham.

This Borough having risen into comparative importance during the present century, it can boast of no historical antiquity, and of no interesting reminiscences, of the old Parliamentary contests. The rapid growth of the town may be in some measure gathered from the great increase in the population since the commencement of the present century. The population of the four townships above named was, in the year 1801, 13,264. In 1851 the population had increased to 103,778, whilst, according to the Census of 1881, the same four townships numbered a population of 183,032 souls. a a By the Re-distribution of Seats Act, 1885, the Borough of Bradford will in future return three Members to Parliament.

HALIFAX is a large Market town and Municipal and Parliamentary Borough, in the Morley division of the Wapentake of Agbrigg and Morley, and liberty of the Manor of Wakefield in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

The town cannot, as a Parliamentary Borough, boast of any great antiquity. Its name is not found in Doomsday Book, nor is it mentioned in any ancient record until the early part of the twelfth century. a In an ancient chapel, dedicated to Saint John the Baptist, is said to have been deposited the real head of that Saint, and hence the name of the place Halifax or Holyface. b

Halifax was created a Parliamentary Borough by the Reform Act of 1832, returning two members to Parliament, and was incorporated a Municipal Borough in 1848. The Parliamentary limits of the borough are defined by the Boundary Act passed in 1832, and are in extent about two miles long, and one mile broad.

The population of Halifax according to the census of 1881, was 73,630, and the number of registered electors in 1832 was 536, and in 1880, 11,728 c

BOROUGH OF KINGSTON-UPON-HULL.

KINGSTON-UPON-HULL, commonly called Hull, the largest sea-port in Yorkshire, and third port in point of importance in the United Kingdom, is the principal town in the East Riding of Yorkshire.

It appears by the Parliamentary returns furnished in 1879 that Hull first returned Representatives in the year 1304, (33rd Edward I.) since which time representatives have been sent, with some few intermissions, from this borough to Parliament.

Hull being a county of itself, the writs are directed to the Sheriff of "The Town and County of the Town of Kingston-upon-Hull," who is the returning officer at Parliamentary elections. The right of election was, up to the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832, exclusively in the Burgesses or Freemen. a

In the year 1303, King Edward I. granted to the town of Kingston-upon-Hull that it should be a free borough, and the men of it free burgesses, and that they and their heirs might devise their lands. b The right of admission to the freedom of the Borough could be obtained by birth, apprenticeship, or purchase. All sons of freemen upon attaining the age of twenty-one, and all persons who had served their apprenticeship to freemen, were entitled to be admitted as burgesses or freemen. c

c Sheahan's History of Hull.

The Parliamentary limits of the borough, defined by the Statute 30 and 31 Vict. Cap. 102, were considerably extended by the Hull Borough Extension Act, 45 and 46 Vict. Cap. 112. These limits now include, in addition to the old town, Sculcoates, Drypool, and Southcoates, the the parish and township of Marfleet, and portions of the several parishes and townships of Hessle, North Ferriby, Cottingham, Newland, Sutton, and Stoneferry.

The population of Hull, which has greatly increased since the commencement of the present century, according to the census of 1881, was 154,240. a By the Borough Extension Act the population was increased to 165,690. b

The Corporation of Hull voted £50 to defray the expenses of his funeral, and contributed a sum of money to erect a monument over his remains in the church, but its erection was forbidden. a An Alderman of Hull.

Sir William St. Quintin, of Harpham, in the county of York, was an Alderman of the Hull Corporation, and Mayor in 1699 and 1715. At this election Sir James Bradshaw, Knt., who was a candidate, petitioned against the return, complaining that the Sheriff having received the writ, to gratify the Mayor and some Aldermen, appointed the election to be held the next morning after the receipt of the writ, and although he was acquainted that such notice was not sufficient, yet he proceeded to the election when he did not poll so many by two hundred as at other times. The Mayor and Aldermen made many freemen on purpose to vote against the petitioner, and threatened others that intended to vote for him. The committee resolved that Sir William St. Quintin and Charles Osbourne were duly elected.

a Afterwards Member for Flint ; he died in 1881.

b Recorder of Hull ; in February, 1849, Mr. Baines was appointed President of the Poor Law Board, he vacated his seat, but was re-elected without opposition.

c Mr. Clay was a popular member, and represented Hull twenty-six years; he is said to have been one of the finest open air-speakers in England.

d Of Rossington, co. York

e This election was followed by a petition against the return of the unsuccessful candidates; the result was that Mr. Clay and Lord Goderich were unseated, and the Borough was, for a time, unrepresented in Parliament; a commission of inquiry into the Corrupt Practices ~~Act~~ at the election, was opened at Hull on May 23rd, 1853, which lasted 57 days; the report, which was exceedingly lengthy, found that corruption was all but universal, votes purchased without scruple. The freemen looked upon him as the best candidate who was the best paymaster, etc.

f The present Marquis of Ripon, Lord High Steward of Hull, and late Governor General of India. The Marquis was presented with the freedom of the Borough in 1885.

a In February, 1857, Mr. Watson was made a Baron of the Exchequer; Mr. James Clay was elected in his stead without opposition.

b Son of the Earl of Shaftsbury.

c Barrister-at-Law, Q.C.; afterwards Member for Sunderland; Recorder of Newcastle; the Mr. Seymour elected in 1854 was a merchant.

d Immediately after this election the liberal party determined to appeal to the House of Commons against the return of Mr. Hoare, and a petition was presented accordingly, whereupon the Conservatives decided to present a counter petition against the return of Mr. Clay. The petition of the latter was subsequently withdrawn. The result of the other petition was the unseating of Mr. Hoare for bribery committed by his agents; the bribery proved consisted in the employment of poor voters, chiefly freemen at wages averaging three shillings and sixpence per day, as runners, messengers, &c., during the contest. But as many of these voters had not devoted the whole of their time to these duties, the Committee looked upon their services as colourable employment, and decided that the election so far as regarded the return of Mr. Hoare was a void election. A writ was issued for the election of a member in the place of Mr. Hoare, that gentleman introduced Mr. Joseph Somes, of London, an eminent shipbuilder to his supporters, the Liberals again brought forward Mr. Lewis, who was again defeated.—Sheahan.

a Of Hull, merchant and shipowner ; represented Hull upwards of twenty years.

b The last Parliament, which expired on July 6th, 1865, is the longest Parliament on record since the passing of the Septennial Act. The result of this election astonished everyone, and was attributed to a disagreement between Mr. Somes and Mr. Hoare, each thought the other ought to give way. Mr. Somes polled 494 plumpers, and Mr. Hoare 248. The number of voters on the register was 5,490, and the number polled was 4,671.

c This was the first election after the passing of the extension of the Borough Franchise Act, the number of registered voters amounted to 17,146. The defeated candidates were, Mr. Henry John Atkinson, of Gunnersbury House, late of Hull, an Alderman, and Merchant and Shipowner, was Mayor of Hull in 1864 ; elected member for North Lincolnshire in 1885 in the stead of Mr. Rowland Winn, elevated to the peerage ; Mr. Robert Baxter, of London, Solicitor.

d Mr. Clay died at Brighton, September, 1873.

e This was the first election by ballot, and took place during the recess. The successful candidate, Mr. Joseph Walker Pease, of Hessle-wood, and Hull Banker, had not an opportunity of taking his seat, the Parliament having been dissolved soon after the election ; Mr. Pease, who was Colonel of the Hull Rifle Volunteers, died at Hessle-wood, November 22nd, 1882.

At this election 16,328 voters polled. Colonel Pease polled 7,118 plumpers.

BOROUGH OF KNARESBOROUGH.

KNARESBOROUGH, a Market Town and Borough in the Wapentake of Claro, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, is a town of great antiquity; but there is no ground for supposing that it is a very ancient Parliamentary Borough. Knaresborough is not mentioned in Doomsday Book, and it does not appear to have ever sent any representatives to Parliament until the reign of Queen Mary, (save once, in the reign of King Edward I. in 1299) At that time the right of election was vested in eighty-four or eighty-eight burgage houses, the owners of which were entitled to vote.^a The elections continued free until about the year 1719, when two gentlemen, striving against each other in canvassing, first began the practice of purchasing the burgage-houses; by these means a majority of the votes was always in the possession of some particular family. The Slingsby family were the principal land-owners in the town and neighbourhood, and some member of that family, with a few intermissions, represented the borough for about two hundred years. The Duke of Devonshire eventually became the owner of all the burgage-houses except four. The following account is interesting as shewing the then mode of conducting the elections in this borough: "when an election comes on, a number of men are sent from a distant part of the country, and a certain burgage-house conveyed to each of them for the day; they are then told who they are to vote for, and some man is chaired as proxy for the absent member. There are no resident electors; the men who are sent to vote are the Duke's tenants; they come, if there is occasion, from his estate in the East Riding, but generally they are those about Bolton Bridge, near Skipton, twenty miles from Knaresborough, on the other side of the wild mountainous forest. The circumstance of the members never appearing at the elections, but having some old Pauper chaired by way of proxy, which is said to be the constant practice, is really insulting. It cannot be said that there is bribery and corruption, as the elections are managed almost without any visible expense whatever." a The Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832 extended the right of voting to inhabitant householders, qualified as that act provided, and the Borough continued to return two Members to Parliament until the year 1868, when, owing to the population of the place being under ten thousand, the number of members was reduced to one.

The population of Knaresborough, according to the Census of 1881, was 5,000, and the number of registered electors at the election of 1880 was 762. b

After the battle of Marston Moor, in 1644, Cromwell's Lieutenant, Whalley, took up his quarters at Goldesburgh Hall, Sir Richard Hutton, the owner, then being with his regiment, besieged at York. After the surrender of that City to the forces of the Parliament, Whalley entreated Sir Richard to leave the army and return to his own house and family at Goldesborough, but Sir Richard not choosing to trust himself in the power of an avowed enemy, and being firmly attached to the Royal cause, he passed by his house, his lady and family, and after some months spent in toilsome marches and continued alarms, he was slain in a fight at Sherburn, October 15th, 1645. His daughter married Anthony Byerley, Esq., and with her his estates passed into that family.

A new writ was therefore issued for electing another Burgess to serve in his stead.

d Member of Scarborough in 1620. Mr. William Deere love was returned, but Sir William Constable petitioned, the House resolved that the return of William Deere love by his own Deputy, made two or three days before the election only for this service, was an undue and void return, and should be taken off the file. Sir William Constable's election was declared good, and the return amended. Mr. Deere love was the son-in-law of Benson.

Before the petition was heard Lord Latimer died, and it appearing to the Committee that Mr. Fawkes had 23 old votes, and Lord Latimer but 19, they therefore resolved that Mr. Fawkes was duly elected.

b Sir Henry Slingsby petitioned against the return of Mr. Fawkes. The Committee stated that the question was whether Mr. Fawkes or Sir Henry Slingsby were duly returned and elected, that Mr. Fawkes had 22, and Sir Henry Slingsby 20 voices. BOROUGH OF LEEDS.

LEEDS, the chief seat of the woollen manufacture, and one of the most populous and important towns of Yorkshire, is a Parliamentary and Municipal Borough in the Wapentake of Skyrack, and liberty and honour of Pontefract in the West Riding.

The Borough of Leeds, although incorporated by a charter of King Charles I. in 1626, by a second charter of King Charles II. in 1661, and by a third of King James II. in 1684, was not created a Parliamentary Borough until the year 1832, when, by virtue of the Parliamentary Reform Act of that year, it became one, sending two members to Parliament. On one occasion only was Leeds represented in Parliament before the passing of the Reform Act, viz. in 1654, during the Interregnum, when Adam Baynes was returned to Parliament for the 'Borough of Leeds.' ^a

In the year 1867, by virtue of the Statute 30 and 31 Vict. Cap. 102, "An Act to further amend the laws relating to the representation of the people in England and Wales," and an additional member was given to the Borough of Leeds.

^a Mr. Adam Baynes, of Knowesthorpe near Leeds, was an officer in the Parliamentary army under General Lambert, after the restoration he was permitted to retire to his paternal estate, on which he died in December, 1670.

The population of Leeds, according to the Census of 1881, was 309,119. a

BOROUGH OF MALTON.

MALTON is a Market town of considerable importance in the Wapentake of Rydale, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. The Parliamentary limits of the Borough comprise the parishes of Old Malton, New Malton, and Norton, the latter being in the East Riding, and separated from Malton by the River Derwent. Malton having made returns to Parliament in the time of King Edward I.,^a ceased to send representatives until it was restored as a Parliamentary Borough in the year 1640, by order of the House of Commons, to its ancient privilege of sending members to Parliament.^b The author of the Representative History of Great Britain, referring to the Borough of Malton, observes: "This Borough is the property of Earl Fitzwilliam, who keeps an agent here, and nominates the members."^c In the reign of King James I., Lord Eure was the chief proprietor of the Manor and Borough of Malton. His estates, in default of issue, eventually became the property of two ladies, his cousins and co-heiresses, one of whom, Mary, the youngest, married William Palmes, Esq., of Lindley, who, in right of his wife, held the Manor of Old and New Malton. Mr.

^a The members returned in 1295 were Mattheus de Malton and Johannes de Ebor de Malton, and in 1298 Johannes de Malton and Nicholaus de Laystyngham.

Palmes represented the Borough for upwards of twenty years, when, about the year 1710, he conveyed the Manors of Old and New Malton, together with his property in the Borough, to Sir Thomas Wentworth, Bart., an ancestor of the present Earl Fitzwilliam, in whose family the Borough has remained ever since, and who still possess great influence in the elections. Notwithstanding the numerous petitions from the Borough of Malton, impugning from time to time the returns made, there appears to have been no resolution of the House of Commons as to the right of election. The elective right was exclusively exercised by the inhabitants, who held by burgage tenure, the greater proportion of which tenure being the property of Lord Fitzwilliam. By the Reform Act of 1832, the Parliamentary limits of the Borough were extended to the parish of Norton, and the elective franchise conferred on the inhabitant householders. By the Statute 30 and 31 Vict. c. 102. (1868), the population of the Borough being under 10,000, it was deprived of one of its members.

The population of the Borough, according to the Census of 1881, was 8,754, and the number of registered electors at the general election of 1880 was 1,379. a a A double return was made at this election. Mr. Worsley and Mr. Harrison petitioned, and alleged that they were duly elected and returned by the proper officer, William Barton, Bailiff, of the said Borough, but Mr. Palmes and Sir William Strickland persuaded one Nathaniel Harrison to act as Borough Bailiff, who, without any percept, proceeded to a separate poll and made a return. Mr. Palmes and Sir William Strickland also presented a petition shewing that they were duly elected and returned by Nathaniel Harrison, Gentleman, Bailiff of the said Borough, yet one, William Barton, (a busy attorney in the said town) by illegal practices with one, Daniel Copley, Seal keeper to the High Sheriff, and others, procured to himself the custody of the precept for election, whereupon the High Sheriff made a double return. c This was the first election since the passing of 30 and 31 Vict. Cap. 102., which reduced the number of representatives for Malton to one member.

BOROUGH OF MIDDLESBROUGH.

MIDDLESBROUGH, a market town and seaport, in the West Division of the liberty of Langborough, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, is a Municipal and Parliamentary Borough, returning one member to Parliament.

Middlesbrough, with portions of adjoining townships, was made a Parliamentary Borough by the "Representation of the People Act of 1867." The Parliamentary limits of the the Borough include part of the townships of Middlesbrough, Linthorpe, Acklam, Ormesby, Normanby, and Eston. The town was incorporated by charter in 1853.

The Municipal Borough of Middlesbrough, which does not embrace so wide an area as the Parliamentary Borough, has no pretensions to antiquity. It has risen into importance within the last half century. At the commencement of the present century it consisted only of a single farm house. The staple trade of the town may be said to be that of iron, and owes its importance, principally, to the discovery of ironstone in the Cleveland hills.

The increasing importance of the Borough of Middlesbrough may be in a great measure estimated by the rapid increase in its population during the present century. The Census returns shew that in 1801 the population was only 25, whilst the returns for 1881 record that the population then numbered 72,145 persons. a

a These Census returns relate to the Municipal Borough; the Parliamentary Borough embraces a wider area. The increase of the population of the former, taken from the returns of the present century, is thus shewn: in 1801, the population was 25; in 1811, 35; in 1821, 40; in 1831, 154; in 1841, 5,463; in 1851, 7,631; in 1861, 10,235; in 1871, 43,047; and in 1881, 72,145.

By the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, the Parliamentary limits of the Borough of Middlesbrough has extended to so much of the Municipal Borough as are not included in the Parliamentary Borough. This Act makes no alteration in the number of Representatives for the Borough.

b There was no contest at this election. Mr. Bölckow was an eminent iron-master, senior partner of the firm of Bölckow, Vaughan and Co., Middlesbrough. Mr. Bölckow was the first Mayor of the Borough.

c Mr. Bölckow died at Ramsgate, on the 18th of June, 1878.

BOROUGH OF NORTHALLERTON.

NORTHALLERTON, a Market town and Parliamentary Borough in the Wapentake of Allertonshire, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, returns one Member to Parliament. This Borough having sent representatives to Parliament in the twenty-sixth year of the reign of Edward I. ^a intermitted and made no return until the year 1640, when the Borough was restored to its ancient privilege of sending members to Parliament by order of the House of Commons. From the year 1640 to the year 1832, Northallerton continued to return two members to Parliament, but since 1832, in consequence of the provisions of the Parliamentary Reform Act of that year, the Borough has only had one representative. The right of election was formerly in the Burgage-holders. The principal proprietors of Burgage-tenure property were for a long time the Earl of Harewood and Henry Pierse, Esq. Mr. Oldfield, in his account of the Counties, Cities, and Boroughs of the United Kingdom, says, that in the Borough of Northallerton the number of voters are nominally about two hundred, but actually only two. As a natural consequence the Borough was represented for many years by the members or nominees of these two families, and a contested election was an event rarely or ever seen. The late William Battie Wrightson, Esq., was also a considerable proprietor, and sat for many years as one of the members for the Borough.

The Parliamentary limits of the Borough extend to the adjoining townships of Deighton and Romanby and the small parish of Lazenby.

The population of the Borough, according to the Census of 1881, was 5,445, and the number of voters on the register at the general election of 1880 was 912.^a

BOROUGH OF PONTEFRACT.

PONTEFRACT, a Borough and Market town in the West Riding, is not mentioned in Doomsday Book, although there is some obscure mention of a castle, but it is open to doubt whether it has reference to this place. It appears that Pontefract returned members to Parliament as early as the 23rd and the 26th Edward I.,^a after which time it returned no representatives until a charter was obtained from King James I. In 1620, a resolution was carried in the House of Commons that the Borough of Pontefract should return members to Parliament. On that occasion it was shewn that, in the time of Henry VI., a return had been made from this place, but that the inhabitants could not send members by reason of their poverty.^b Consequent on the passing of this resolution a writ was issued, and from that time the Borough has been represented in Parliament.

It was for a long time a matter of fierce controversy as to the right of election between the persons who were owners of property within the borough of freehold bur-gage tenure and the resident householders. Numerous petitions were, from time to time, presented to the House of Commons raising the question. For some time the decisions of the House were mainly in favour of the burgage tenure holders; and it was not until 1793 that the question was finally set at rest by a decision of the House, that the right of election in the householders resiants was fully and legally established. The right of election being in the burgage freeholders, as a natural consequence these freeholds became the property of one or two persons, who either sat for the Borough themselves or returned such of their friends as they pleased. For many years the Lowther family had the largest number of these freeholds.

 About the year 1734, Sir William Lowther sold his burgage tenures and property to Lord Gallway, in whose family the representation continued, until, as just mentioned, by the decision of the House of Commons, the elective franchise was confirmed to the householders resiants. The Reform Act of 1832, in consequence of the then prevailing mode of the election by resident householders, did not make so much difference in the number of voters.

The population of the Parliamentary limits of the Borough of Pontefract, according to the Census of 1881, was 15,332, and the number of registered electors at the last election in 1880 was 2,429.^a

Sir John Bright polled 72 votes and Mr. Monckton 70. Mr. Monckton petitioned. It appears that one freehold of Burgage tenure had been split up into four by sham conveyances, and on both sides illegal practices had been used. making sham conveyances, and bringing men from a distance who had no connection with the town, to vote. They stated their views and wishes to Sir Rowland Winn, who generously undertook to try the merits of the case. At the election there was much rioting in the town; the houses of the Mayor and the Recorder were assaulted, the windows wholly destroyed. The Mayor was compelled to return Lord Gallway and Sir Rowland Winn. Mr. Monckton and Mr. Strachey petitioned. On the hearing of the petition the House declared the election to be void (Boothroyd). To such an extent was the party feeling carried at this time, that Lord Gallway's party and Sir Rowland Winn's party each elected a Mayor, and kept the town for some time in great confusion, till one of the two gave up the mace — Annals of Yorkshire.

a Notwithstanding the determination of the House of Commons that the last election was void for the reasons given, Sir Rowland Winn and his friends determined again to contest the point. Sir Rowland, together with his brother, Mr. Edward Winn, offered themselves as candidates on the rights of the inhabitants. Lord Gallway and Mr. Strachey again stood on the burgage tenure interest, and were returned by the Mayor. Sir Rowland Winn and his brother petitioned, and on February 6th, 1770, the House again resolved "That the right of election was in persons having within the Borough a freehold of Burgage tenure, paying a Burgage rent." The return of the sitting members was confirmed.

The return was petitioned against. On March 3rd, 1775, the chairman of the Committee, to whom the petition was referred, reported to the House that the two sitting members were duly elected.

b In the year 1783, Lord Gallway accepted the Envoyship to Munich, and in consequence vacated his seat. Mr. Smyth having satisfied himself that the right of election was in the inhabitant householders resiant, consented to stand as a candidate in their interest. Mr. J. BOROUGH OF RICHMOND.

RICHMOND, a Borough and Market town, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, is a place of great antiquity. It had a castle in the time of William I., although it is not mentioned in Doomsday Book, as a borough. In very early times, however, it acquired that character, as appears by a charter, without date, of John, eldest son of the Duke of Bretaine, and lord thereof, wherein he grants to the Burgesses of Richmond the burgh with the rents of assize, &c.^a This charter was confirmed by King Edward III. Queen Elizabeth afterwards incorporated the Borough of Richmond, and in the twenty-seventh year of her reign, called upon it to send Burgesses to Parliament. The right of election, up to the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act, was in the owners of ancient Burgages, of which, for many years, the Dundas family possessed a complete majority. At the time of the restoration, Sir John Yorke was one of the representatives, and for upwards of a century one of that name and family continued to represent the borough.

The Earl of Zetland is the principal land-owner, and possesses great influence in the borough.

The population of Richmond, according to the Census of 1881, was 5,542, and the number of voters on the register at the election of 1880 was 696. ^a

^a By the Re-distribution of Seats Act, 1885, Richmond ceases to be a Parliamentary Borough, and will no longer have the privilege of returning representatives to Parliament.

BOROUGH OF SCARBOROUGH.

SCARBOROUGH, the "Queen of watering places," and a sea-port town in the North Riding of the County of York, is an ancient borough, by prescription returning two Representatives to Parliament. The right of election was formerly confined to a corporation comprised of forty-four individuals only. The corporation consisted of two bailiffs, two coroners, four chamberlains, and thirty-six capital burgesses.^a This corporation continued to be the sole Parliamentary constituency until the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act in 1832, when the right of voting was extended, as in other boroughs, to ten pound householders.

Scarborough, although undoubtedly a place of great antiquity, is not mentioned in Domesday Book, yet notwithstanding the omission, it was evidently in existence prior to the Norman Conquest; on the authority of an old historian ^b we learn that Tosti, Count of Northumberland, the outlawed brother of Harold, King of England, in one of his expeditions landed at Scarborough and plundered and burnt the place.

Scarborough appears to have returned Representatives to Parliament so early as the 18th of King Edward I., and has continued, with but few intermissions, to do so up to the present time. The limited character of the constituency up to the year 1832, as a matter of course, caused the aristocratic element gradually to obtain a hold on the representation of the borough ; thus, from the latter part of the sixteenth century, for upwards of fifty years, the Chomleys and Thompsons were the patrons of the Corporation, and branches of one or both of these families were usually chosen as the representatives. Afterwards the Duke of Rutland and the Earl of Mulgrave shared the patronage of the Borough, and in their hands the elections were practically vested until the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act in 1832. During the long period extending from the reign of King Edward I. (1295) to the reign of King William IV. (1832), upwards of five hundred years, there were but few contests for Parliamentary honours, and but few attempts were made by the resident freemen and inhabitants of the borough to assert their claims to vote at Parliamentary elections.

The population of Scarborough, according to the Census of 1881, was 30,504, and the number of registered electors at the general election in 1880 was 4,302. a

BOROUGH OF THIRSK.

HIRSK, a market town and parish in the wapentake of Birdforth, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, is a Parliamentary borough, returning one member to Parliament. With the exception of a return made in 23 Edward I.,^a this borough returned no representative until the last Parliament of King Edward VI., when two members were returned. The borough continued to return two members to Parliament from that time until the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act in 1832, when the number of members was reduced to one. The right of election, up to 1832, was in the owners of fifty burgage-holds, in the old town of Thirsk, forty-nine of which actually belonged to the Frankland family.^b Members of the Frankland family or their nominees represented the borough from the time of the Restoration to the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832, comprising a period of upwards of one hundred and fifty years. The learned historian of the Representative History of Great Britain says, "that during the greater part of that long period the number of voters were nominally fifty, but actually one."^c The right of the burgage-holders never seems to have been seriously questioned, and on account of the peculiar character of the constituency there have been but few contested elections, and but few petitions against the returns are to be found in the Journals of the House of Commons.

The population of Thirsk, according to the Census of 1881, was 6,312. a

BOROUGH OF WAKEFIELD.

WAKEFIELD is a Parliamentary and Municipal Borough, and County town of the West Riding, situate on the River Calder, in the wapentake of Agbrigg and Morley, in the West Riding of the County of York.

Wakefield was created a Parliamentary Borough, with one representative, by the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832. Although a place of great antiquity, it appearing from Doomsday Book to have been part of the Royal Desmesnes of King Edward the Confessor, it does not appear to have ever been called upon to return Representatives to Parliament until the year 1832.

The Population of Wakefield, according to the Census of 1881, was 30,854, and the number of registered electors in 1880 was 4,430. a

BOROUGH OF WHITBY.

WHITBY is a market town of some importance, and a fashionable watering place on the East coast, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. It is a place of great antiquity, a charter having been granted by King John to the burgesses of the town, confirming all the liberties given by the Abbot and Church that they might hold the town in free burgage, and might have free laws and free acquitances in all things to the Church of Whitby, and the Abbots and Monks thereof.

Whitby does not appear as a borough in the Domesday Survey, it belonged then, with other large territories, to William de Percy, brother to Scoto, Abbot of Whitby. Although it was made a borough by the Abbot, and confirmed by the Charter of King John, there is no record of its having ever returned members to Parliament until the year 1832.

The Reform Act of 1832 created Whitby a Parliamentary borough, with the privilege of returning one representative to Parliament. The area of the Parliamentary borough comprises the townships of Whitby, Ruswarp, and Hawsker-cum-Stainsacre.

The population of the Parliamentary borough of Whitby, according to the Census of 1881, was 14,621, and the number of registered electors at the general election of 1880, 2,163.^a Disfranchised Boroughs.

ALDBOROUGH.

ALDBOROUGH, a village in the lower Division of the Wapentake of Claro, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, ranked as a Parliamentary borough up to the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832, with the privilege of returning two representatives to Parliament. Aldborough, the ancient Isurium,

“ Where bold Brigantian Kings
Ruled awful, in the martial clime was hailed
By the loved name of York,” although not mentioned as a borough in Domesday Survey, is a place of great antiquity. It did not send members to Parliament regularly before the year 1558.

The right of election was in the inhabitants paying scot and lot. As the borough contained only a little over one hundred houses, the number of voters was very small, and being like the adjoining borough of Boroughbridge, usually in the hands of one or two proprietors, contested elections seldom happened. When Aldborough ceased to return members to Parliament, the population did not exceed five hundred persons.

BOROUGHBRIDGE.

BOROUGHBRIDGE, a township in the parish of Aldborough, also ranked, up to the passing of the Reform Act of 1832, as a Parliamentary borough, and returned two members to Parliament.

The first return was in 1553. The right of election was limited to certain burgage-holders, and these burgage holds were usually in the hands of one or two proprietors. For a long time the Duke of Newcastle returned all the four members for Aldborough and Boroughbridge. The population of Boroughbridge, when it ceased to be a Parliamentary borough, did not exceed 500 persons.

BEVERLEY.

BEVERLEY, a market town of considerable importance, and always considered the capital of the East Riding, is a place of great antiquity, and boasts of having received its first charter from King Athelstan in the early part of the tenth century. Beverley is a municipal borough, and was, up to the year 1870, a Parliamentary borough, returning two members to Parliament. This borough sent burgesses to Parliament during the early part of the reign of King Edward I., but it does not appear to have made any return after the year 1306, until the 5th of Elizabeth, who, in the year 1573, granted it a Charter of Incorporation. The right of election, up to the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act in 1832, was in the freemen of the town, who acquired the right of freedom by birth, servitude, or purchase. The right of freedom by birth was acquired by being the son of a freeman born within the liberties of the town, and was entitled to his freedom on attaining the age of twenty-one. The right of freedom by servitude was obtained by serving an apprenticeship to a freeman within the liberties of the town upon the expiration of his apprenticeship. The right of admission to the freedom of the borough by purchase was in the Corporation, the amount to be paid being arbitrary according to the circumstances, trade, or occupation of the purchaser, at the discretion of the Corporation. Until the reign of James II., there appear to have been no contests at the elections for this borough. During a long period, Lord Yarborough held property in the borough which commanded about two hundred votes, and generally returned one member; but his lordship, probably growing tired of the expense, sold his property, and the borough became ever afterwards independent of patronage. Beverley does not appear, at any time, to have been celebrated for the purity of its Parliamentary elections. Many of the freemen took money of the candidates as a matter of course, and were consequently always eager for a contest, regarding little the political opinions of the candidates, so long as there was an opposition which secured them the possession of "the loaves and fishes, as well as the liquor they swam in."^a On the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act in 1832, the right of election was thrown open to the ten-pound householders, which did not very materially alter the number of constituents. After the general election of 1868 a petition was presented against the return of the two sitting members—Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Kennard; a commission under a recent statute was issued to enquire into the corrupt practices reported to have prevailed at the election. The Commissioners reported that corrupt practices had prevailed at the election in 1868, and at several of the preceeding ones; the result was the passing of an Act of Parliament 33 and 34 Vict. Cap. 21, in 1870, by which it was declared that from and after the passing of that Act the borough of Beverley should cease to return any member or members to Parliament.

a "Sir Michael Warton died March 25th, 1725. He was a great benefactor to the town of Beverley; previous to his persecution and the confiscation of his property, he was frequently called the rich Warton, because he was the richest man for to be a gentleman only that was in all England, for he was worth £15,000 a year; Madam Pelham, of Brocklesby, was his daughter."—De La Pryme's Diary. This connexion with the house of Brocklesby was probably the beginning of the Yarborough interest, which eventually became very great.

b Nephew and co-heir of Michael Warton, Esq., and cousin to Sir Isaac Newton.

c A descendant of Sir John Ellerker, of Risby Park.

d Son of Charles Pelham, Esq., of Brocklesby, by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Michael Warton, of Beverley.

e Mr. Ellerker Bradshaw was returned, but unseated on petition by Sir Charles Hotham. A very gross scene of corruption which took place at this election gave rise to the Statute 2 Geo II., for the prevention of bribery at elections. Sir Charles Hotham died Jan. 15th, 1737.

j After the hearing of the petition against Mr. Glover, the Attorney General was ordered by the House of Commons to prosecute him for perjury; he was accordingly indicted and tried at the Central Criminal Court April, 1858, found guilty and sentenced to four months' imprisonment. The perjury assigned was an allegation in Mr. Glover's affidavit as to his qualification at the time of the election.

a A petition was presented against the return of Mr. Walters and Major Edwards for bribery. The Committee decided that Mr. Walters was not duly elected, and that Major Edwards was duly elected, and that the election so far as regarded Mr. Walters was void. The Committee recommended that two persons named Daniel Boyes and Robert Taylor should be prosecuted for bribery.

b Son of Sir James Walker; succeeded as second Baronet, 1883

c Son of Sir Tatton Sykes, Bart., of Sledmere; afterwards Member for the East Riding, and now, for the Buckrose Division.

d Mr. Edwards was created a Baronet in January, 1866; he died in April, 1886.

e A petition was presented against the return of Sir Henry Edwards and Mr. Kennard, which was heard in March, 1869. The sitting members were unseated; a commission was issued and ultimately an Act of Parliament, 33 and 34 Vict. Cap 21, was passed by which the borough was disfranchised.

HEDON.

HEDON is an ancient market town in Holderness, in the East Riding of Yorkshire, and was, up to the passing of the Parliamentary Reform Act of 1832, a Parliamentary borough, returning two representatives to Parliament. Hedon claims to be a place of considerable antiquity, having, like Beverley, received its first charter from the Saxon King, Athelstan. The first record of any members being returned for this borough is in the year 1295, in the 23rd year of the reign of King Edward I.;^a since that time there are no returns found until the first year of King Edward VI., (1547), from which time there appears to have been a regular succession of representatives.

The governing charter of the borough was granted by King Edward III, in 1349. The right of voting for representatives in Parliament was in the burgesses or freemen, whose privileges were obtained either by descent, or apprenticeship to a freeman residing within the borough, or by purchase or gift, the latter, however, was seldom exercised; every candidate was required to purchase his freedom as a qualification for his candidature; the amount to be paid for the purchase was in the discretion of the Corporation. This borough has never been the exclusive property of any one or two individuals, as was the case with most of the small boroughs in the

^a The representatives returned to that Parliament were Stephanus de Burton and Ricardus Civis.

County. It has been said of Hedon, with perhaps some amount of truth, that almost every burgess thought it incumbent upon him to lay the candidates under as severe a contribution as possible.^b Money was paid to voters as a matter of custom, and was not considered as an act of bribery; there were, no doubt at every election, a select few who stood out, and towards the end of a close contest, received bribes. One way of indirect bribery was not uncommon—the candidates' agents were in the habit, during the interval between elections, of lending money to burgesses, which was seldom or never returned.

The population of Hedon, according the Census of 1831—the Census previous to its disfranchisement—was 1,080, and the number of electors who voted at the last contested election, which was in 1826, was 331. The population of the borough according to the Census of 1881, fifty years later, was 966.

Disused Boroughs.

DONCASTER.

THE large and important town of Doncaster, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, is a municipal borough with a rich corporation, and a place of great antiquity, the Danum of Antoninus; and has never, with one solitary exception, enjoyed the privilege of sending members to Parliament. That exception was in the year 1337, when writs were issued August 18th, 11 Edward III., to the mayors and bailiffs of the several towns and boroughs in England therein named, to send three or four men from each town or borough to Parliament. The three persons selected in obedience to the writ for the town of Doncaster were:—

JOHANNES FRERE

ROBERTUS DE MESSYNGHAM

JOHANNES HEDELOT.

Since the year 1337 no returns to Parliament have been made from the town of Doncaster.

TICKHILL.

TICKHILL, in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, and liberty of Tickhill in the West Riding of Yorkshire, is a market town of some importance, "an ancient town and fortified with an old castle, was of such dignity heretofore that all the manors hereabouts appertaining to it were styled of the honour of Tickhill." ^a Tickhill has only upon one occasion sent Representatives to Parliament, viz., in the year 1295 (23 Edward I).

In 1337 (11 Edward III) Tickhill was one of the towns to which writs were issued to send three or four men to Parliament, but no return of the persons so sent (if any were sent) are to be found.

The representatives sent to Parliament in 1295, were

JOHANNES BOTE

RICARDUS FIL. RICARDI DE EASTFIELD. ^b

PICKERING.

PICKERING, a market town in the North Riding; a town of great antiquity, which, according to tradition, "was founded by the Britons before the Roman invasion" ^c upon only one occasion sent representatives to Parliament, viz., in the year 1295 (23 Edward I.)

The persons returned upon that occasion were

^b Probably an ancestor of William Eastfield, Seneschal, of the Lordship of Holderness and of the Honour of Tickhill, who died December 24th A.D. 1386, and in whose memory an altar tomb was placed in the chancel of the church at Tickhill.

^d Whether there were two members of the same name or whether only one member was returned is uncertain. The above is taken from the Parliamentary return.

YARM.

YARM, otherwise Yarum, a market Town in the Wapentake of Lanborough in the North Riding, situate on the River Tees appears to have sent once, and once only, representatives to Parliament, viz., in the year 1295 (23 Edward III).

The representatives then returned were

FRANCISCUS DE AULA
RADULPHUS DE ESTRE.

RAVENSER.

RAVENSER, in later years called Ravensburg, and Ravenspurne, in the Wapentake and Seignior of Holderness, was situate at the extreme south east corner of the East Riding of Yorkshire. Once the principal seaport on the River Humber. Ravenser was long ago swallowed up by the inundations of the sea and the Humber; the exact site of the town cannot now be traced.

The size and importance of the town of Ravenser may be gathered from royal grants which have from time to time been made, and scraps of its history which are still preserved. In 1241 (25 Henry III.) the King granted to William de Fortibus, Earl of Albemarle, one market every week for ever at his manor of Ravenser, and also a fair every year of fifteen days' duration.^a In 1298-9, (26-27 Edward I.) a charter was granted to the town of Ravensroad, (probably adjoining Ravenser on the west) when 300 marks were given for it by the men of old Ravenser.^b An event occurred here, in 1399, which has rendered this place conspicuous in history, and which has been immortalized by Shakespeare. The Duke of Lancaster, afterwards Henry IV., then effected a landing here, where he was joined by the Earl of Northumberland, Earl Percy, and the Earl of Westmoreland, with a force of 3000 men.^a

When the town of Ravenser was destroyed by inundation cannot be ascertained. Some allusion to the place is made by Leland, "the Ryver Hull kepith yn the Marche of Holdernes to the very mouth of Hulle Haven, and then the Marche of Holdernes is to Ravenspur."^b

It is worthy of remark that William de la Pole, the first mayor of Hull and ancestor of the Duke of Suffolk, was a native of, and a wealthy merchant of Ravenspurne.
